

Dentures ...

Expensive is the word that comes to my mind; to have them made and then to maintain the buggers. And then you go along and chew a toffee or biltong or simply sit on the damn things.

Here is a simple and effective repair recipe that saved me R800.00:

Take a sharp razor/knife and edge the breaks top and bottom about 45degrees.

Place pieces together and pour a drop of glue between the cracked halves. Position and give pressure for one minute.

Pour bi-carb into “V” and over the immediate sides. Now be careful not to pour too much as you have to remove most of it with sand paper later on.

Turn around and do the same. Wait for an hour then sand down and leave till tomorrow. The only person to lose out here is the Dentist who charges too much in any case.

Wouldn't it be a grand thing if we could repair our Government so easily?
